Report description:

In 2023, full-service restaurants continue to recover from the devastating losses registered during the COVID-19 pandemic; however, the strong double-digit value growth is largely the result of rising unit prices and inflation. For a growing number of local consumers, rampant inflation has undermined their ability to afford to eat out in restaurants and forced them to prioritise essential products and make savings where they can. Local consumers complain that the restaurant prices are now on par...
