Report description:

Home insecticides is mainly a seasonal, functional product and the main driver of volume sales each year is the size of the insect population. Overall, weather conditions resulted in lower demand for home insecticides in 2023. In addition, the high cost of living has forced consumers to reassess their expenditure in 2023 and cut down on non-essential purchases. Rising unit prices have also impacted the appeal of these products, although current value growth has undoubtedly benefitted.
