In Canada, initiatives like electric vehicle manufacturing is projected to aid the expansion of the copper busbar market. This is further supplemented by workshops by key market players. For instance, the Electric Mobility Canada developed the Electric Vehicle Technology Roadmap assisted by the government. It entailed a series of four workshops each concerned with four aspects of electrical mobility respectively. These include electrical drive components, electrical power grid interfacing, vehicle integration & optimization, and batteries & generally energy storage.

Such workshops help spread awareness regarding different energy solutions and its distribution methods. One such distribution method is the laminated copper busbar.
