Report description:

Exchange Traded Fund (ETF) is a form of marketable security that owns multiple underlying assets as compared to a single stock. These investment securities are frequently used for diversification investment as they include a range of tradable assets. These assets generally include stock, commodities, bonds, or a combination of investments. Hence, the broad availability of different exchange traded funds in the securities market offers clients an opportunity to quickly gain portfolio exposure to definite sectors, styles, industries, or countries. Further, the constant development and innovations in the emergence of new ETF structures, such as thematic ETFs, have led to a significant rise in investment or trading strategy developments. These factors are expected to propel the market growth considering the global scenario.

Increase in role of passive investment strategies is driving the growth of the market. In addition, growing government support for the exchange-traded fund market and a surge in demand for physical ETFs are fueling the growth of the exchange-traded fund market. However, increased risk to financial market stability as well as the availability of alternative trading funds constraints limits the development of this market. Conversely, the advent of the computer-built ETF is anticipated to provide numerous opportunities for the expansion of the market during the forecast period.

The global exchange-traded fund market is segmented on the basis of type, distribution channel, investor type, and region. By type, it is classified into fixed income/bonds ETFs, equity ETFs, commodity ETFs, currency ETFs, specialty ETFs, and others. By distribution channel, it is categorized into retail and institutional. By investor type, it is bifurcated into individual investors and institutional investors. Region-wise, it is analyzed across North America, Europe, Asia-Pacific, and LAMEA.

The global exchange traded fund market is dominated by key players such as BlackRock, Inc., Charles Schwab & Co., Inc., First Trust Portfolios L.P., Goldman Sachs, Invesco Mutual Fund, JPMorgan Chase & Co., Mitsubishi UFJ Financial Group, Inc., State Street
