Report description:

The global food away from home (FAFH) market size was valued at $4,266.3 billion in 2021 and is estimated to reach $5,848.7 billion by 2031, growing at a CAGR of 2.3% from 2022 to 2031.

The global food away from home market is experiencing exponential growth over the past decade as a result of the increased popularity of dining out culture. The substantial rise of quick-service restaurants and well-known fast-food franchises in developed and developing countries is primarily due to the eating-out culture. Major businesses or food brands are also implementing innovative marketing techniques that place a stronger emphasis on the menu to attract customers. Another thing that draws customers to fast food restaurants like McDonald's, KFC, and Domino's is cleanliness and hygiene. The market for meals consumed away from home is anticipated to experience growth as disposable income rises and quick-service restaurants and fast-casual restaurants become more prevalent in developing countries like India, China, Brazil, and Indonesia.

In 2021, North America held the greatest market share with 36.4%, while Asia-Pacific is predicted to expand due to the region's increasing demand for eating out and the expansion of well-known restaurant chains. There are many well-known restaurant chains in the U.S., such as Carrabba's Italian Grill, The Cheesecake Factory, Texas Roadhouse, McDonald's, KFC, and Olive Garden. Key factors influencing the growth of the North American FAFH market include the development of restaurant chains across the country, popularity of the dining-out lifestyle, high disposable income, and surge in use of online meal delivery services.

The rise in demand for fast food items like burgers, sandwiches, and pizza in emerging countries like China, India, and Australia is a significant factor that drives the growth of the FAFH industry in the Asia-Pacific region. The main cause for the same is the
