Report description:

Third-party administrator (TPA) is a licensed third-party entity, which provides administrative solutions to health insurance companies, employment firms, and other entities. It acts as an intermediary between the insurance company and the policyholder to ensure cashless claims and reimbursement claims are settled effectively. Furthermore, the increase in health insurance customers has accelerated the quantity of work and led to a decrease in the quality of services. Therefore, TPAs are established to assist insurers in arranging for cashless treatments for customers demanding seamless claim settlements. In addition, TPAs also scrutinize hospital bills and documents for their accuracy and help in the processing of the claim.

The rise in the adoption of third-party administrators in the health insurance industry and the rise in the need for operational efficiency & transparency in the insurance business are driving the growth of the market. However, security issues and privacy concerns, along with limited understanding or awareness of insurance third-party administrator services limit the growth of this market. Conversely, technological advancements in third-party administrator services are anticipated to provide numerous opportunities for the expansion of the market during the forecast period.

The insurance third-party administrator market is segmented on the basis of service type, end user, enterprise size, and region. By service type, it is segmented into claims management, policy management, commission management, and others. By end user, it is bifurcated into life & health insurance and property & casualty (P&C) insurance. The life & health insurance type segment is further bifurcated into life insurance and health insurance. The health insurance is divided into disease insurance and medical insurance. Further, disease insurance is segmented into senior citizens, adults, and minors. By enterprise size, the market
