Report description:

In 2023, there was reduced use of air care in Germany due to greater mobility post-pandemic, especially when compared to previous years when consumers spent greater time indoors. The category was mainly driven by replacements rather than new purchases, resulting in limited growth. Additionally, economic uncertainty and rising inflation led many consumers to cut back on air care usage as they prioritised essential spending over non-essential items. Nevertheless, overall demand for air care remain...
