Report description:

For the third year in a row, volume sales of baby and child-specific products decreased in Uruguay during 2023, while current value growth remained below the rate of inflation. This negative sales trend can be attributed mainly to the prevalence of cross-border shopping, which in turn is due to the differences in the prices charged for these products in retail outlets in the way and consumers can expect to pay for the same products in neighbouring Argentina. In addition, these price anomalies un...
