Report description:

In 2024, slow growth in pet products is partly attributed to the weak economy and declining disposable incomes in Morocco. In addition to this, brands and product availability remains limited. At the same time, other pet product goods are highly expensive, and therefore, considered to be a luxury by most low- and middle-income Moroccan pet owners. Consequently, most pet care products are purchased by upper-income pet owners and foreign expatriates living in Morocco, who tend to be able to afford...
