Report description:

Mexico continued to see elevated inflation in 2023, albeit the country still recorded steady GDP growth. Projections for 2024 suggest lower inflation of around 4%, with GDP growth of between 2-3%. With slower economic growth predicted for 2024, this is having a negative impact on sales of eyewear, which are set to record slower growth in value and volume terms compared to 2023. Sunglasses has been the most affected category by this situation with these products considered the least essential. T...
