Report description:

In 2023, the home and garden market in Sweden experienced a decline due to a decrease in consumer confidence. This, coupled with rising inflation and interest rates, contributed to a negative economic outlook. This downturn led to a reduction in the construction of new houses and apartments, alongside a decrease in people relocating. As a result, sales of durable goods, including larger and expensive items, such as living room furniture and kitchen interiors, were significantly impacted. Consume...
