Report description:

Traditional toys and games in Taiwan registered modest retail current value growth in 2023, the market's first full year without COVID-19 restrictions as the national border reopened near the end of 2022. Many consumers resumed travel and out-of-home socialisation, which limited the time and money spent on traditional toys and games. Moreover, still relatively high inflation amid stagnant payment levels hit spending power. Rising unit prices caused by higher labour and shipping costs reduced the...
