Report description:

After three years of having at least a period of time in the year when COVID-19-related restrictions affected restaurant visits, many operators looked forward to 2023 as the first year of a return to normalcy. High inflation and its reverberating effects throughout the economy, however, had other ideas for 2023. While high inflation had affected the industry for a few years, a reversal in the rate of inflation between grocery and restaurant costs saw price increases in restaurants overtake those...
