Report description:

Cider/perry is a declining category, with a lack of interest or investment that could help stimulate sales. Due to falling demand, retail chains are reducing the shelf space provided for cider/perry, especially discounters, some of which have even give up selling cider/perry altogether, replacing it with better-rotating products. A significant challenge for cider/perry is the high average unit price of these products, which is almost twice that of beer per litre. With prices continuing to see do...
