Report description:

Retail volume sales of in-car entertainment, and in-car navigation systems in particular, continue to decline in Sweden in 2024. This trend is primarily driven by the increasing prevalence of built-in navigation systems in a growing share of the car fleet, which negates the need for additional in-car navigation purchases. Furthermore, the widespread use of smartphone navigation apps offers a convenient and cost-effective alternative, further diminishing demand for standalone in-car navigation de...
