Report description:

Demand for gum in Egypt is expected to grow slightly in 2024, despite a significant increase in unit prices. The latter was initiated in response to the rising costs of raw materials such as sugar, which were passed onto end consumers. At the same time, supply chain disruptions, exacerbated by the Red Sea crisis, caused a shortage of imported ingredients, such as flavourings, which together with currency fluctuations, made the cost of importing raw ingredients more expensive.
