Report description:

In-car entertainment in Germany is set to continue to decline in retail volume terms in 2024, and at an even more rapid rate than in the previous year, as the devices in this category become increasingly redundant. In-car navigation devices are being replaced by smartphone apps and in-built software, whose accuracy and multifunctionality match and even outdo the performance and features of in-car navigation devices. Especially in the context of purchase reluctance, which is driving consumers to...
