Report description:

Baby food in Canada is projected to see a further strong decline in retail volume sales over 2024. While Canada is witnessing a slowdown in the rate of inflation, baby food, led by milk formula, is set to post a further double-digit rise in the average retail current unit price in 2024. Although the recall impact is subsiding, milk formula, and other types of baby food, continues to be characterised by high and rising prices. During 2024, milk formula is registering one of the highest price incr...
