Key Highlights

Repower, founded on June 14, 1904, as Kraftwerke Brusio AG, began its journey in Valposchiavo, Graubunden, Switzerland. The company, initially focused on hydroelectric power, has grown into a prominent player in the global energy market. Its headquarters are located in Switzerland, with a significant presence in Italy through Repower Italia. The company operates along the entire electricity value chain, including production, trading, distribution, and sales. Repower manages approximately 3,000 kilometers of electricity grid, making it the largest distribution network operator in Graubunden. It produces electricity primarily from hydropower in Switzerland, Italy, and Germany. The company is also active in Central European trading platforms for electricity, gas, and certificates. Key milestones include the 2000 merger to form Ratia Energie AG, the 2010 rebranding to Repower, and the recent 2024 reopening of the renovated Robbia hydroelectric power plant.
