Report description:

Analgesics in Hong Kong remains on its path of recovery as the resumption of travel has led to an increase in retail tourism activity. Historically, tourist expenditure, particularly from mainland Chinese consumers, represented a substantial source of demand for analgesics in Hong Kong. The resurgence of inbound travel has certainly provided a tailwind for the category's recovery efforts. However, the delayed rebound in visitor spending has emerged as a dampening factor, moderating the overall p...
