Report description:

Evaporated milk has been popular among Peruvian households, valued for its role in direct consumption, dessert preparation, and traditional recipes. It has long been regarded as essential for children's growth and overall health. However, the rise of affordable shelf stable milk and increasing awareness of the content of evaporated milk have led to slowing sales. Despite this, evaporated milk remains the leading product type, not only in other dairy in Peru, but also across dairy as a whole.

Euromonitor International's Other Dairy in Peru report offers in-depth knowledge of the market at a national level, providing local insight and understanding unavailable elsewhere.
