Report description:

As Estonia returns to pre-pandemic routines in 2024, the demand for dermatological products has stabilised, with no significant fluctuations. Consumers primarily seek treatments for common skin issues such as acne, eczema, and dry skin. Over-the-counter solutions remain popular alongside more specialised dermatological products, reflecting a normalised but consistent market demand. This steady interest is driven by lifestyle factors and stress-related skin conditions, which continue to affect co...
