Report description:

The market for dermatological products in Taiwan is poised for positive, albeit modest, growth in current value terms in 2024, with the significant prevalence of skin diseases in the country underscoring this trend. Taiwan's subtropical climate, characterised by high humidity and warm temperatures, fosters conditions that can lead to fungal infections, such as tinea and athlete's foot. Additionally, the spicy foods commonly found in Taiwanese cuisine can irritate the skin, potentially exacerbati...
