Report description:

In 2024, fine wines/champagne and spirits in Canada experienced marginal value growth, with low single-digit increases across most categories. Volume growth remained flat, with only luxury whiskies managing to surpass low single-digit volume gains. This subdued market performance can be attributed to cautious consumer spending amidst high inflation and a rising cost of living, compounded by a noticeable decline in alcohol consumption and the growing social acceptance of non-drinkers. This "sober...
