Report description:

Edible oils in Norway is seeing shortages continue to cause disruption and push unit prices higher in 2024. While prices have started to level out, weak olive oil production due to adverse weather conditions in key producing regions, such as Spain, and the war in Ukraine's impact on sunflower production, are affecting prices, resulting in further volume decline and changing purchasing habits. However, while the disruptions to production remain, inflation is subsiding, resulting in a more modest...
