Key Highlights

Huntington Ingalls Industries Inc., headquartered at 4101 Washington Avenue, Newport News, Virginia, was incorporated in 1886 as a spin-off from Northrop Grumman. The company operates primarily in the defense sector, specializing in shipbuilding and related technologies. Huntington Ingalls is a leading provider of military and civil ships, serving both the U.S. Navy and Coast Guard, and operates through several key segments including Newport News Shipbuilding and Ingalls Shipbuilding.

The Newport News Shipbuilding segment focuses on the design, construction, and maintenance of nuclear-powered aircraft carriers and submarines. This segment is a cornerstone of the U.S. Navy's fleet and plays a crucial role in national defense. The Ingalls Shipbuilding segment, based in Pascagoula, Mississippi, is renowned for building surface combatants such as destroyers, amphibious assault ships, and offshore patrol cutters, contributing significantly to the U.S. Navy and Coast Guard's capabilities.

Operating primarily within the United States, Huntington Ingalls Industries provides advanced shipbuilding and maritime solutions. The company's extensive experience and strategic focus on shipbuilding technologies reinforce its position as a leading defense contractor, supporting the operational readiness and effectiveness of the U.S. military and its maritime services.
