Key Highlights

NTPC Ltd., formerly known as National Thermal Power Corporation Limited, is India's largest power generation company. Incorporated in 1975, NTPC is headquartered at NTPC Bhawan, SCOPE Complex, 7 Institutional Area, Lodhi Road, New Delhi 110003, India. The company operates across multiple segments of the power sector, with its core business being thermal power generation. However, NTPC has diversified its portfolio to include hydroelectric power, nuclear power, and renewable energy sources such as solar and wind. In addition to power generation, NTPC is involved in power trading, coal mining, and consultancy services. The company's operations span across India, with power plants strategically located in various states to ensure efficient power distribution nationwide. NTPC has a significant installed capacity of tens of thousands of megawatts, making it one of the largest power utilities in Asia. While primarily focused on meeting India's domestic energy needs, NTPC has also expanded its presence internationally, offering consultancy services and participating in power projects in several neighboring countries. The company's commitment to adopting new technologies, improving operational efficiency, and increasing its renewable energy portfolio positions it as a key player in India's power sector and a crucial contributor to the country's energy security and economic growth.
