Report description:

Processed meat and seafood continued to be affected by high prices in 2023, even if inflation had stabilised after peaking during 2022. Companies, unable to fully pass on costs to consumers in the previous year, once again raised their prices in 2023, meaning only a slow recovery in unit volume terms for processed meat and seafood in 2023, with sales remaining below the levels seen before the pandemic. Despite consumers successfully adjusting their budgets and gradually resuming their typical co...
