Report description:

Childrenswear in Egypt experienced a decline in volume terms from the second quarter of 2024 onwards, primarily due to the devaluation of the Egyptian pound and the escalating costs of production, such as higher prices for cotton and threads. These economic challenges drove up prices by 30-40%, compelling consumers to limit their purchases to essential items. This decline in volume was further exacerbated by the economic downturn, as household budgets were increasingly strained, leading to reduc...
