Report description:

Consumer credit in the UK is performing well, with 5% growth for gross lending and 7% growth for outstanding balance in 2024. Both card and non-card lending are contributing to the rise in gross lending. This is due to consumers continuously applying for credit to cover their living expenses. In addition, a growing number of local consumers now use credit to pay for daily expenses because of the UK's persistently high cost of living. In fact, the proportion of UK respondents who stated that they...
