Report description:

While the price inflation of fresh meat such as poultry and beef slowed in 2023 and early 2024, the average unit price of fish and seafood in Australia continues to rise, by 6%, following the 7% increase the previous year. Given that local consumers have a clear preference for meat as a protein source, there has been a decline in total volume sales of fish in 2024. However, demand for crustaceans continues to grow, driven by the fact that prawn and crab are key features of meals during holidays,...
