Report description:

Coffee in Croatia is expected to register healthy current value growth, but only marginal volume growth in 2024. While inflation overall has reduced, prices continue to rise for coffee. This is due to climate change, which is leading to prolonged droughts in coffee-producing regions. In addition, security issues around the Red Sea have led to logistical issues and increased transport costs. In response to these escalating costs, manufacturers have called for the removal of tax on coffee, arguing...
