Report description:

Consumer credit in Chile is facing some challenges in 2024, due to overall economic uncertainty, inflation, and tight credit policies. That said, a decline in rates since late 2023 has revived credit card usage, although inflationary pressures continue to influence borrowing behaviours, limiting consumers' willingness to incur new debt. Consumers' ability to take on new loans (gross lending) is limited by the rising cost of living and general economic uncertainty, leading them to prioritise savi...
