Report description:

Following the sales peak seen during the pandemic, sales of food preparation appliances continued to decline both in value and volume terms in 2024, with people spending more time away from the home and cooking less. Although the number of people following flexible work arrangements remains significantly higher compared to the pre-pandemic period, with people working more from home, this has not translated into them cooking as much as they used to. Time - especially free time - has become an inc...
