Report description:

In 2023, the average unit price of vegetables in the UK experienced a significant hike, driven by a convergence of adverse factors. The lingering effects of the 2022 droughts, combined with exceptionally wet weather during the spring and summer of 2023, severely impacted local crop yields. Compounding these issues were disruptions in the supply chain due to labour shortages and increased border checks, particularly critical for the UK, which relies heavily on vegetable imports. Additionally, man...
