Report description:

In 2024, consumer credit in Canada reached its highest rate of participation despite ongoing economic pressures, with the number of Canadians holding at least one credit product surpassing 31 million in 2024 - an all-time high, according to TransUnion. This increase has been mainly driven by a surge of Generation Z consumers and new immigrants entering the credit market. The most popular credit products among clients looking for first-time access to credit are credit cards and personal revolving...
