Report description:

The unit price of orange juice in South Africa has increased during the year due to supply constraints of raw orange juice. This has been caused by lower global orange production, driven by adverse weather conditions in major producers such as Brazil, as well as a reduction in South Africa's local supply. As a result, local producers' input costs have increased, based on raw orange juice prices which were already at an inflated level, with the cost being partially passed on to consumers. These p...
