Report description:

Small cooking appliances in South Korea, while expected to continue to experience retail volume decline in 2024, as it did the two previous years, is set to perform relatively better than many other consumer appliances categories. The fall in sales is expected to continue, largely due to the economic downturn, which has led many consumers to view these products as non-essential. Unless their existing appliances break down, people do not feel a strong need to purchase new ones, and there have not...
