Report description:

Sales of home care saw steady growth in current value terms in 2024 although this was mainly driven by higher unit prices rather than a significant increase in volume terms. Elevated inflation, alongside an overall reduction in the promotional activity across retailing served to push prices up during the final few years of the review period, although prices were more stable in 2024 than in the previous two years as inflation also stabilised. Despite consumers continuing to look at reducing t...
