Report description:

In Belgium in 2024, prices in limited-service restaurants stabilised overall, and the most negative and impactful effects of the inflation crisis began to wane. However, prices remained high, as did the pressure on purchasing power. As a result, Belgian consumers, increasingly price-sensitive and conservative with spending, gradually shifted from full-service restaurants to limited-service restaurants, and the latter performed well in terms of foodservice RSP (retail selling price).
