Report description:

In a post-pandemic context, local consumers are opting for more economical options within limited-service restaurants in Chile, when dining out or ordering in meals. Although inflation has reduced, the moderate growth in GDP has made consumers more cautious with their spending, impacting non-essential industries such as foodservice. Within limited-service restaurants, there has been a price war as consumers opt for more affordable options, meal pack promotions or loyalty discounts. This has been...
