Report description:

Cooking ingredients and meals posted a moderate 2.2% in 2025. The market slowed compared to the thriving period 2021-2022 when convenient solutions and the growing home cooking trend laid the ground for innovation and experimentation. New launches have subsided due to high inflation and disturbed global supply chains; however, consumers' desire for novel products has remained. Products suited to various dietary, lifestyle and health needs have continued to see demand despite tighter budgets.
