Description

Report Scope

This report analyzes the Middle East and North Africa (MENA) cold chain market, using 2024 as the base year, and provides market projections from 2025 through 2030, including compound annual growth rate (CAGR) estimates. It covers key market dynamics, technological advances, regulatory factors and business considerations shaping the cold chain industry. The report examines market drivers, challenges and trends across various applications, including food, pharmaceuticals and chemicals. The market is segmented by temperature range, technology, applications and services, offering insights into storage, transportation and monitoring solutions. Additionally, the report evaluates regional trends and investment opportunities, highlighting factors influencing market expansion in different MENA countries. All values in the report are in USD.

Turkey and Israel are excluded from this analysis due to their well-established cold chain infrastructure, which differs significantly from other MENA nations. Including them would distort the market assessment, as their challenges and growth potential differ from those of the emerging markets in the region. By focusing on developing cold chain markets, this report provides a strategic perspective for businesses looking to expand their footprint in MENA's evolving logistics landscape.

Report Includes

- An analysis of the cold chain market in the Middle East and North Africa (MENA) region
- Analyses of the market trends, with revenue data for 2024, forecasts for 2025, and projected CAGRs through 2030
- Estimates of the current market size and revenue growth prospects, accompanied by a market share analysis by component (offering type), service type, temperature range, application, and country
- Facts and figures pertaining to the current market dynamics, technological advances, regulatory policies, investment trends and prospects, and the impact of macroeconomic factors
- A look at cold storage solutions, logistics services, refrigeration technology, and supply chain management
- Insights into the emerging technologies, infrastructure, and the market outlook for the cold chain sector in emerging MENA countries

Executive Summary

Summary:

The report provides an analysis of the Middle East and North Africa (MENA) cold chain market. Using 2024 as the base year, the report provides estimated market data for 2025 through 2030. The market in this report is segmented by temperature range, technology, applications, and services. It also explores market drivers, challenges, and trends across various applications.

Reasons for Doing this Study

The MENA region presents a significant opportunity for the growth and expansion of the cold chain market. With a diverse and rapidly expanding population, the demand for temperature-sensitive logistics solutions is increasing across industries such as food, pharmaceuticals and chemicals. The region's hot climate and rising urbanization further drive the need for efficient cold storage and transportation solutions, ensuring the quality and safety of perishable goods.
