Key Highlights

The Central Bank of Egypt (CBE), established in 1961, is Egypt's central regulatory body for banking and monetary policy. Headquartered in Cairo, Egypt, the CBE plays a crucial role in shaping the country's financial landscape by overseeing the banking system and ensuring monetary stability. As an independent public entity, the CBE operates in the financial services industry within the banking sector. It serves as the primary authority for managing Egypt's currency, foreign exchange policies, and overseeing the financial health of commercial banks.

The bank's responsibilities include implementing monetary policies, managing the country's foreign exchange reserves, and promoting financial inclusion. It works to ensure the efficiency and stability of payment systems and has a significant role in protecting consumer rights within the banking sector. The CBE's revenue, reported in LEMN (Local Egyptian Monetary Notes), stood at 110,862 as of the last fiscal report, with a financial year-end in June.
