Key Highlights

The Electricity Generating Authority of Thailand EGAT is a leading state enterprise responsible for electric power generation and transmission across Thailand. Established in 1969, EGAT has played a central role in supporting the country's economic growth and development through reliable energy supply. Headquartered in Nonthaburi Province, EGAT operates a comprehensive network of power plants and transmission lines that span across the nation, ensuring energy security for all regions. The company's core business segments include electricity generation, transmission, and system operation. EGAT owns and manages a diverse portfolio of energy assets, including hydroelectric, thermal, combined cycle, and renewable energy power plants. It also purchases electricity from independent power producers and neighboring countries to strengthen the stability of Thailand's power system. Through continuous investments in technology and sustainable energy projects, EGAT remains a cornerstone of Thailand's infrastructure, driving innovation and resilience in the country's power sector while expanding its geographic presence within Southeast Asia.
