Key Highlights

North Eastern Coalfields Ltd, commonly known as NEC, is a unit of Coal India Limited and was established in 1975 following the nationalization of coal mines in India. Headquartered in Margherita in the Tinsukia district of Assam, NEC is responsible for managing and operating coal mining activities in the northeastern region of the country. Its geographic presence spans across several states including Assam, Meghalaya, Nagaland, and Arunachal Pradesh, making it a key energy player in this part of India.

The company operates both underground and opencast coal mines, with notable facilities such as the Tikak Colliery and Tirap Colliery in Assam. Tikak Colliery includes two major opencast projects, contributing significantly to the overall coal production of the region. NEC is actively pursuing environmental and governmental clearances to open new mines, aiming to expand its production capabilities. Through its operations, NEC plays a vital role in supporting regional energy needs and generating employment, reinforcing its importance in India's coal sector.
