Construction sites are exposed to many forms of dangers, including falling debris, sharp instruments, and heavy machinery. The use of personal protective equipment, such as hard hats, gloves, safety footwear, and goggles, is vital in preventing injuries associated with these dangers, leading to the Brazil personal protective equipment market expansion.

Moreover, Brazil produced around 2.2 million vehicles in 2023. Hybrid (HEV) and battery (BEV) electric cars are also to be manufactured in a total of 1 million units by 2030. Use of personal protective equipment is essential in the automotive manufacturing sector because it ensures safe manufacturing for those employees who are exposed to many kinds of risks. This includes heavy machinery, moving equipment, and sharp tools. All these present dangers to the workers. Protective gloves and steel-toed boots avoid cutting, scarping, or crushing injuries.
