The Deteriorating Air Quality is Pressing the Demand for Air Purifiers in the Country

The Indian market for air purifiers is growing significantly owing to the prevalence of air borne diseases and pollution in different cities of India. This has led to a surge in the adoption of air purifiers as indoor air can be more contaminated than outdoor air since it does not undergo circulation, thereby propelling the market growth.

In addition, the market is stimulating in the Northern parts of the country in cities like Delhi, Punjab, and Haryana due to stubble burning, which leads to a deteriorated air quality, smog conditions, and causes several health and breathing disorders, such as asthma and bronchitis. In line with this, the market growth can further be associated with the unfavourable winter conditions, low wind speed and ventilation index impedes the dispersion of pollutants and further leads to breathing problems, thereby pushing the market growth. Moreover, the advent of the coronavirus pandemic further catalysed the demand for air purifiers in the country to clean indoor air and get rid of viruses and pollutants.

Air Purifier: Market Segmentation

An air purifier is a device that removes contaminants from the air in an enclosed room to improve the indoor air quality. These purifiers contain single or multiple filters and a fan that sucks the air. The captured air is then passed through filters to absorb undesirable particles to circulate clean air.

Advancements in Air Purification Technologies are Pushing the Growth of the Market

The alarming rates of air pollution in the region has shifted the status of air purifiers from a luxury to a necessity, which is a significant factor invigorating the growth of the market. As a result, manufacturers are increasingly innovating and incorporating advanced technology to tackle the ever-increasing need for air purifiers in the country. The most widely used air purifiers contain the High-Efficiency Particulate Air (HEPA) filters that constitute high velocity air designed to dry out viruses. The advent of the coronavirus pandemic propelled the market growth of these filters, thereby adding to the overall growth of the market. Furthermore, the advancement of breakthrough UV light to collect and completely kill unwanted microorganisms is another feature, which is positively influencing the growth of the market. Apart from this, the growing health awareness, inflating disposable incomes, and changing lifestyles are additional factors providing impetus to the market.
