Report description:

Based on end use, the Australia container glass market share is driven by food as it preserves the freshness, flavour, and quality of food products, extending shelf life and maintaining product integrity. As per Australia container glass market analysis, glass containers can be recycled while minimising the environmental impact and reducing waste in the food industry. Glass packaging is perceived as convenient and hygienic as it offers no risk of leaching contaminants into food products. Over the period, there has been an increasing demand for recycled packaging as it minimises the environmental impact and leads to sustainability, thus boosting the Australia container glass market. The increasing consumption of food and alcoholic and non-alcoholic beverages has been driving the Australia container glass market growth which requires glass packaging to keep the items hygienic and safe from contamination, container glasses are suitable for sensitive or perishable food such as dairy products, sauces and condiments that require stringent hygiene standards. Orora Limited has installed a $25m facility in its new glass beneficiation plant in South Australia to recycle 150,000 tonnes of post-consumer glass each year. Further, the growing foodservice sector is further pushing the market forward. As per the United States Department of Agriculture, the Australian consumer foodservice sector reached an estimated AUD 54 billion in 2022.
